AN ESSAY
ON THE
ORIGINE of the ROYAL FAMILY
OF THE
STUARTS, &c.

DOCTOR KENNEDY, in his Dissertation, derives the Origine of the August Family of the STUARTS from Milesius and his Descendants, the ancient Kings of Ireland.

'Tis very obvious to every considering person, tolerably well acquainted with British Antiquities, that this Scheme of the Doctor's is very ill founded, and that many Arguments may be adduced for disproving what he, without any good Ground, alledges.

The First Argument, which naturally offers itself to me, is taken from the 8th Page of his own Preface: In which he divides Scotland into two Parts, the one on the North, the other on the

the South-side of Severus's (which he ought to have called Hadrian's) Wall, between the Firths of Dumbartoun and Edinburgh, for protecting the Inhabitants on the South-side, from the Incursions of the Scots. On the North-side he places the Picts and Scots; on the South the Saxons, that became Masters of the Southern parts, after the Decay of the Roman Empire. In consequence of this Position he must necessarily own, That the STUARTS, who for many Ages have swayed the Sceptre of Scotland, are not originally Irish, since their principal Residence was in the Shire of Renfrew, which was formerly a Part of the Kingdom of Northumberland, subject to the Saxons; and consequently, on the South-side, not on the North-side of the Wall: As any body may understand that can but look on a Map.

A Second Argument may be drawn from the Adventures of Fleannus, which the Dr. relates, in the 192 and 204 Pages of his Book, his sudden Flight to Wales, after the tragical and barbarous Death of his Father, which he supposes to have fallen out, under the Usurpation tion of Macbeth, inclines me to think, that he was not of an Irish Extract. For if his Predecessors had been Irish, in this lamentable State he was reduced to, his Thoughts would certainly have been bent on Ireland, as the fittest place in the World for his retreat. The Nearness of the country, the easy Access he had to it in a few Hours, the relation he had to the Kings of Ireland, his speaking the same language, and many other Reasons, should have induced him for his own Safety to make this Choice. One may infer then from his retiring into Wales, in travelling to which he could not but foresee, that he would be exposed to vast Dangers, and behoved to pass thro' a great Deal of the Country subject to M'beth, and take Sanctuary in a place where a Language different from that of the Scots was spoken. Besides all this, it was into a Country, where, according to Dr. Kennedy's Scheme, Fleannus was unknown, had no Relation to those who governed the State, and had no Reason to expect any Support or assistance from them. From all which it is reasonable to conclude, that the STEWARTS were not of an Irish Extract.

A Third Argument I adduce, is from the Conduct of our Kings, that were forced from their Dominions during the irregular Successions of Donald Bane, and Duncan. They betook themselves to England, as a safe and sure Sanctuary, that they might be protected from the Insults of their Enemies ; and when they returned to Scotland, they enacted the same laws and Customs they had seen observed in England, judging this Course necessary for the publick Tranquillity of the Kingdom: And to give the greater Lustre and Authority to the Court, in Imitation of England they created several Ministers of State, viz. a Chancellor, Constable, Chamberlain, a Marechal, Steward, Butler, Lord Chief Justice, &c. All these great Offices were entrusted with English and Normans, of a distinguishing Merit and Reputation, that had followed our Kings in their Wars, or had entertained them in their Exile, in a manner becoming their Birth and Dignity.

The

The Irish, who in the first Years of Malcolm's Reign disturbed the publick Peace, and filled Scotland with Blood and Confusion, were excluded from all public Posts. And Malcolm IV. who erected the Office of Seneschal, or Steward, reckoned the Irish his mortal Enemies. So that the singular Opinion of our Author concerning the Origine of the STEWARTS is altogether unaccountable.

An additional Argument against the Opinion of Dr. Kennedy, may be taken from the Names of Alan and Walter, that were proper and peculiar to our first Senechals or Stewarts, under the Successors of Malcolm the III. Those Names were unknown to the Scots, and even to the Irish, before the Conquest of their Country, by Henry the II. King of England, which may appear from our Charters in the 11th and 12th Century; and the Accounts we have of the Ecclesiastical Councils in Ireland; in neither of which we find the Names of Alan or Walter, but a deal of strange and barbarous Words, harsh to be pronounced, and even hardly to be put in

in Writing, such as Arreah-Foevrach, Duach-Teamrach, Cobthach-Coelbreage, Ollill-Casfbie-clach, Fedlum-Lave-Dboidh-cuige, &c. On the other Hand, the names of Alan and Walter have been common in England, ever since the Time of William the Conquerer; and in Scotland, amongst the Inhabitants of the low Country, since our Kings join'd to their Crown Northumberland, Westmorland, Cumberland, Huntington and Northampton. It is then abundantly evident, that the STEWARTS are not descended from the Race of the Kings of Ireland, otherwise they would have continued these odd Names that are found in Dr Kennedy's Book, in some Charters of King David * and Henry his Son,

* Charta Davidis Regis facta Ecclesiæ omnium Sanctorum de May.

David Rex Scotiæ, Sciant tam posterì quam præsentès me—Dedisse et concessisse Deo et Ecclesiæ omnium sanctorum de May, dimidium Ballagallan sicut Gillecollin, Macthumpethin et M'beth, Mactorfia et Malmure Thein de Chellin, - - - prædictam terram periverunt.

Charta Davidis Regis facta Turstino Eborum Archiepiscopo. Testibus de Scotia Wimaro milite, Aldano filio Alfemeldi, Ulkil filio Maldredi, Gillecollin Stuppepach.

Son, Earl of Huntington: and in the Council of Kells mention'd by Waræus in the Year 1152.

The Fifth Argument I take from the Chartular of the Abbay of Paislay, in my own Custody. Walter the first STEWART, as we are told in the first Page of that Chartular, founds a splendid Monastery at Paislay, in the Year 1164, for thirteen Monks of the Order of Cluny brought from Wenlock in England, pro anima Regis David, et Regis Henrici, et Comitum Henrici. David King of Scotland died in the Year 1153, Henry King of England died in 1135, and Henry Earl of Huntington died 1152.

Walter the Grand-child of the first STEWART, endows the Nuns of Syxle in Lincolnshire with a considerable Sum, Redditum trium Marcarum argenti, annuatim ad duos anni terminos, in perpetuum solvendum, Page 68, of the said Chartular.

Walter, the Grand-child of the first Stuart, founds afterwards a Priory at Dalmulin, on the

the River of Air, for the Canons and Nuns of the Order of Simpringham, whom he brought from York; as appears from Page 104.

'Tis to be regreted, That in former, and even our own Times, Vanity, or a spiritual kind of Pride, and particular Views to the Conve- niency or advantage of some near Relations, has often a greater Share in these Foundations than true Piety, or a zealous Concern for the Good of Religion. And tho' we should not put Things on this Footing, yet 'tis not to be imagined, that Walter the First Stuart would have forgot the Kings of Munster, whom Dr. Kennedy calls his Ancestors, if he had really been descended of them. Would he have, in an extraordinary way, ordered Prayers for Henry King of England, who was a stranger to him, and not for his Ancestors the Kings of Ireland, who died in the Communion of the Church? Would he have provided the Priory with a Colony of English Monks, who, according to the Doctor, could not speak the Language of Scotland, nor be understood by the King or his Subjects? Would he, I say, made choice of them, rather as his own Countrymen the Irish, with whom he might converse without an Interpreter?

And is it to be imagined, That his Grand-child would, in his Foundations, have been so profuse to the English Monks and Nuns, when in the Cloisters of Ireland he might have found great Numbers of all Sorts of Religious, worthy of his bounty, as fit for the same Purpose?

This Preference then, which these Two Stuarts gave to the English, in Exclusion of the Irish, together with something like Affectation in Walter the First Stuart, to mention in his Charter Henry King of England, without noticing the Kings of Ireland, is to me a plain Proof, that our Kings had very little Kindness or Regard for those of Ireland: For Experience may teach us, that all Men, especially Persons of great Note, have a distinguishing Affection for their Country and Family; and when they are descended of Crown'd Heads, or such as have made a considerable Figure, they take a particular Pleasure, even in these Acts of Piety, to proclaim this to the World as often as Occasion offers.

So, for Example, we see that William Baron of Roslin, in his Foundations, particularly mentions his Ancestors; thus, Pro salute animarum recolendæ memoriæ Willielmi quondam Comitis Orcadiæ & Cataniæ, ac Domini de Sancto Claro, Cancellarii & Justiciarii magni, olim, Scotiæ, Nobilis viri Alexandri Stuart, Commendatarii monasterii de Scoon, &c.

Robert the III. follows the same Course, as appears by the Chartulary of Paislay, page 226. Pro salute recolendæ Memoriæ Domini quondam Roberti, Dei gratia, Regis Scotorum illustris progenitoris nostri, animæque Elizabeth Matris nostræ; and so in the 214 Page,

* See the Appen- * Animarum antecessorum et successorum nostrorum, Regum et Senescallorum Scotiæ. In the Page 213, he mentions James, Seneschal of Scotland, who was one of the six Regents that was entrusted with the Government of the Kingdom, after the Death of Alexander

Alexander the III. and styles him Proavus noster.
 In the same Chartular, * Donald Lord * See the Ap-

In fine, our King David I. makes us understand, that he was the Son of Malcolm III.
 and Brother of our Kings, Duncan, Edgar, and Alexander; and does not forget, in his Charters, to mention his Sister the Queen of Eng-

Since then it was the constant Custom in Scotland to mention, in all Foundations, those of each Family who had made any considerable Figure in the World, there is no Manner of Ground to imagine, that our first Stuarts would would have neglected to name the Kings of Ireland, if they had been really descended of them. This Silence then which they continually observed on this Head, is a plain Proof, that they did not reckon themselves descended of the Kings of Ireland.

Further, we may perceive, by a letter directed to Pope John XXII. who succeeded Clement V. the 17 of August 1316. that the Irish, in the Reign of Edward II. (a weak Prince) being resolved to shake off the heavy and intolerable Yoke of the English, which they had for many Years groaned under; in a general Meeting of the States, declared Edward Bruce, Earl of Carrick, their King; and presently dispatched Couriers to Scotland, with pressing letters to send them speedy and powerful Assistance; while their Agents at Avignon were under-hand endeavouring to persuade the Holy Father, to approve and confirm the Choice they had made of him for their King. The Letter begins thus, Sanctissimo in Christo Patri, Domino Joanni, Dei gratia, Summo Pontifici, sui devoti Filii, Dovenaldus O-Neyl, Rex Ultoniae, ac totius Hiberniae hæreditario jure verus Haeres ; nec non & ejusdem terrae Reguli & Magnates, ac populus Hiberniacus. In the Body of the Epistle, Donald O-Neyl assures his Holiness, he was descended in a direct Line from Leogarius King of Ireland, in whose Days St. Patrick was sent by Pope Celestin, to instruct the Irish in the Way of Salvation by our blessed Saviour. A quo (Leogario) ego Dovenaldus prædictus, in linea recta carnalem traxi originem. After which he complains, That Pope Hadrian (he should have said, Pope Alexander III.) had transferred the Crown of Ireland, in the Year 1170, to Henry II. without observing the Formalities usually practised in such Cases : Since which Time, he regrets, that the Irish have been most grievously oppressed by the English, which has occasioned their Rising in Arms from Time to Time, expecting always, by the Force of them, to be delivered from the dreadful Servitude they were under. In the Wars they had with the English, he adds, that above 5000 Men were killed, besides those who died by Famine or Fatigue. Afterwards he enters on a particular Detail of the incredible Cruelties of the English; and represents to the Holy Father, in very moving Terms, That being fully resolv'd to be avenged for the Evils they had suffered from the English, they had unanimously chosen for their King, the Earl of Carrick, who had given great Proofs of his Valour and Conduct in the Wars with the English. Et ut nostrum propositum celerius & congruentius obtinere valeamus in hac parte, Edwardum de Brois illustrem Comitem de Carrick, fratrem germanum Domini Roberti Dei gratia illustrissimi Regis Scotorum - - vocamus in auxilium nostrum & juvamen. Et cum liberum sit unicuique viro suo renunciare, & ipsum in alterum transferre, totum jus quod in dicto regno, ad nos tanquam ad ipsius veros haeredes pertinere dinoscitur, eidem dedimus & concessimus, per Literas nostras Patentes, & ad faciendum inibi Judicium, Justitiam, & Aequitatem, quae, ex defectu Principis, ibidem penitus defecerunt, ipsum Regem, ac Dominum nostrum instituimus ac praefecimus in regno nostro, unanimiter, supradicto, &c.

These Facts are known to all tolerably versed in our History, and those I have briefly related related, will afford another Argument to confute the Doctor's Scheme, for if the STEWARTS had had any Right to the Crown of Ireland, by the indirect Ways, which the Doctor mentions in the 49 Page of his Book, it is not to be imagined, that Donatd O-Neyl would ever so much as have attempted, in a General Meeting of the States of Ireland, to dispose of that Crown to the Prejudice of Walter Steuart, who was universally known to be one of the most enterprizing and bravest Men of the Age he lived in, he would not have given up his Right to the Earl of Carrick, who had no relation to him, but what was very remote and imaginary: Nor can it be thought that Edward Bruce would have accepted the Offer, or that Robert his Brother King of Scotland, would have allowed of such a Disposition, if Walter Steuart, upon whom he had lately bestowed his Daughter in Marriage, had by this Choice been deprived of his Right; since Walter was able to break all the Measures they could concert, for settling the Earl of Carrick on the Throne of Ireland, not only because he was one of the most powerful Lords of that Country, and had his Residence near Ireland, but also because he was one of the best Generals in these times. The Choice then that the States of Ireland made unanimously of Edward Earl of Carrick for their King, preferably to the STEWART, the raising of Men to augment the Irish Army in those Parts belonging to the STEWART, viz. Cow-el, Renfrew, Kyle and Cunningham, the equipping out a Squadron in the Harbours, belonging to Walter Stuart, in order to transport the Forces, the Ammunition and Provisions, the peaceable Landing of the Army, and unloading of the Ammunition and Provisions on the Coast of Ireland, without the least Disturbance from Scotland, are, in my opinion, so many Proofs, or rather Demonstrations, that our STEWARTS were no ways related to the Kings of Ireland, as the Doctor in his Book in vain attempts to prove.

The Last Argument I shall make use of now, is taken from the Dissertation the Doctor has lately published; his chief Design should undoubtedly have been, to give an exact Account of the Genealogy of the Royal Family of the STEWARTS, deducing their Descent, from Milesius King of Galicia and Biscay, to the present Times. For accomplishing of which Design, he should, in the distinctest Manner, have shewn us, that there was a Fleannus and a Banco, from whom he derives our Kings, and that these two famous Adventurers were descended in a direct Line, from Father to Son, from Maine-Leauna, and he, from Eogon-More, descended from Milesius, naming particularly their Grandfathers, and Great-Grandfathers, and not to have left such Gapes in his Genealogy. Nevertheless, all his Discoveries amount only to tell us, in the 48, 143, and 204th Pages of his Book, that Banco was come in a right Line from Maine-Leauna, Son of Cork, King of Munster, as if the World were obliged to take his Word for it, without any further Proof. And Page 192, he adds, very dully, on the Margin, that Cork, King of Munster, derives his Pedigree from Eogon-More, eldest Son of Olil-Ollum, and of Sabia Daughter of King Constantine; notwithstanding he does not in the least notice this Point of History,

History, in the 100 Page of his Book, which was a proper Place for establishing, by solid Proofs, an Assertion lyable to so many Objections. Our Author then, not being able to shew us, with all the Help of his Manuscripts of Tarah, and other valuable Writings belonging to Religious Houses, that there was a Banco and a Fleannus; and all that the little Pretenders to Knowledge of History affirm, on the Credit of Hector Boetius, a modern, and not very exact Historian, serving only to convince any reasonable Man, that there were never any such two Persons in the world, and that they never had any other Existence but in writing or Print. It follows then by a plain Consequence, that the STEWARTS did not come from Ireland, as this Irish Writer alledges.

Moreover, the Doctor not connecting the Descent of Banco from Maine-Leauna, Eogan-More and Milesius, as an able Genealogist would have done, 'tis plain that his Work is not exact; for if Keting, Flabarty, and other pitiful Irish Scriblers, could have furnished him with a Number of imaginary Ancestors, for filling up the empty Places between Banco and Maine-Leauna, and between him and Milesius; I would gladly know how he comes to conceal their Names: And if he has not really found them in these Books or Manuscripts, how comes he to impose on the World, by undertaking in the Title of his Book, and the Preface to it, Pages 3, 11, 13, to deduce the Genealogy of our Kings from Milesius? who, he says, lived about 3000 Years ago, down to the present Times; tho' in the Body of his Book, he goes no further back than Walter, who was undoubtedly Son of Alan, and not of Fleannus; seeing in all publick Records he is designed Walterus filius Alani, Dapifer Regis Scotia *. The Impossibility then of shewing that there was a Banco and Fleannus, Ancestors of our Kings; and that Banco was descended of Maine-Leauna, descended of Eogan-More and Milesius, may convince any Man, that our Royal Family of the STEWARTS are not of an Irish Extract. Leaving then our Author to

* See the Appendix, Num. 3.

to search elsewhere for Proofs that may support better his Assertion; and recommending to him, not to please himself with fabulous Stories, or think to amuse or entertain foolishly the World with them, I present the Reader with a Quotation from Giraldus Cambrensis, mentioned by Warræus, in his Antiquities, P. 17, which may shew that Dr. Kennedy has not all the good Conduct in the World, nor that Respect which is due to the Royal Family of the STEWARTS, when he derives them from such a Race as the Irish Kings are, according to this Account we have of them by Giraldus Cambrensis.

I forbear to translate this Passage of Giraldus Cambrensis, because it would pollute my Pen, and offend Christian Ears: However, for Confirmation of what is here affirmed, Waræus, in his Book de Antiquitatibus Hiberniæ, treating of Irish Medals, Page 154, mentions a Medal, which had in aversa parte jumentum candidum.

Thus I hope I have sufficiently confuted Doctor Kennedy's Scheme: Many will probably object, that I have not established one of my own. In Answer to which, I plainly declare

clare it as my Opinion, that our old Kings were of a Gothish Extract, and the Royal Family of the STEWARTS descended of the Normans and Britons: This I design to prove, in a Dissertation to be published by the First of June, which is to be soon followed by another, giving an Account of the first Settlement of Christianity in Scotland.

STEPHANUS, Dei Gratia, humilis Cluniacensis Abbas, omnibus sanctæ Matris Ecclesiæ filiis & Christi fidelibus, perpetuam in Domino salutem. phum factum de compositione, & scripta ex utraque parte de confirmatione illius, data & accepta, testantur; locus ille inviolatam & integram in perpetuum obtineat libertatem. Ipsum autem Walterum, loci illius fundatorem, & tanti beneficii largitorem, in fratrem suscipimus; & omnium orationum totius ordinis Cluniaci participem constituimus. *Confirmatio Domini Innocentii Papæ, de iisdem.
Ex Autographo.*

INNOCENTIUS Episcopus, servus servorum Dei, dilectis filiis, Priori & Conventui de Passelet, Cluniacensis ordinis, Salutem & Apostolicam Benedictionem. Justis petentium desideriis dignum est nos facilem præbere consensum, & vota quæ a rationis tramite non discordant, effectu prosequente complere: Ea propter, dilecti in Domino filii, vestris justis precibus inclinati, compositionem inter vos ex parte una, & dilectos filios, Priorem & Monachos de Wenloc, ex altera, super immunitate domus vestræ rationabiliter initam, sicut sine privitate provide facta est, & ab utraque parte sponte sponte recepta, & hactenus observata, auctoritate apostolica confirmamus, & præsentis scripti patrocinio communimus. Nulli ergo omnino hominum liceat hanc paginam nostræ confirmationis infringere, vel ei ausu temerario contraire. Si quis autem hoc attemptare presumpserit, indignationem Omnipotentis Dei, & Beatorum Petri & Pauli Apostolorum ejus se noverit incursurum. Datum Laterani 11 Idus Maii, Pontificatus nostri anno decimo.

THE preceding Charters I have adduced, for clearing and confirming what is advanced in the Body of this Essay. One of our Irish Author's Assertions in matter of Fact, which he lays much Stress upon, is That Fleannus, or Fleanchus, was Father to Walter, our first Stewart. To confute this, I found it necessary to publish the preceding Charters, granted by Walter himself and his Lady, who should have known his own Descent, and the Name of his Father, better than any other: As also, Charters granted by Foreigners, which mention his Father by the Name of Allan;

in which Charters, confirmed by the Pope, not the least Escape is allowed, because the least Error in Writing, especially of Names, would invalidate the Grant contain'd in the Charter : Consequently, this destroys entirely the Doctor's wild Assertion, and that of some other late Genealogists, who derive our Stewarts from Banco, whom they make a Collector of the publick Taxes, and one of the Assassins of King Duncan. His Son, if he had any other Existence than that which they have given him, was a lewd Fellow according to their own Accounts, and, before Marriage, debauched the Prince of Wales's Daughter. So that Walter the First of our Stewarts, from whom we can deduce the Descent of our Kings by indisputable Documents, in a direct Line, as well as the collateral Branches, would have been, as they relate the Matter, a Bastard. Which foolish and vile Attempt of theirs deserves an exemplary Punishment, that so others may be deterred from raising and spreading such false and abominable Aspersions.

FINIS.

in which Chapter, confirmed by the Pope, not the least Effect is observed, because the least Error in Writing, especially of Names, would invalidate
 the Grant contained in the Charter. Consequently,
 this degree entitles the Doctor's said Affirmation,
 and that of some other late Genealogists, who derive our Stewards from Harco, whom they make a Collector of the English Taxes, and one of the Ministers of King David. It is not, if he had any other Evidence than that which they have given him, that a kind Father according to their own Account, and before witnesses, descended the Prince of Wales, to the said William the First of England. From whom we are to derive the Descent of our Kings by Insensible Processes, in a direct Line, as well as the collateral branches, would have been, as they were the Father, a Brother, a Sister, a Son, and the like.
 Some of these degrees are very many, and some that so many may be derived from various and differing such false and chimerical Affirmations.
